A STYLIST'S GUIDE TO HAIR

By now, you've probably got a pretty good idea for your summer wardrobe, so it's time to think about what you'll be wearing on the beach. And to give you a little guidance, we've brought in a professional stylist who has worked with some of the most famous people in the world. (That should help.)

Our styling: meet Amy Komorowski.

What's your favorite (male) head of hair of all time?

Elvis Presley. I don't get any more of those styles, but I love them. I was thinking if there is anyone like a modern-day Elvis, and there really isn't. That style got what I want. Like with Justin Bieber or Michael Fassbender, but there's no one with that kind of authentic style to him. I think they would probably be the closest.

What's the number one hair gaffe we should warn men about?

Using too much product. Don't worry too much about it. I call it the "pomade."

What's the most fun guy's hair?

The interesting thing about men's trends is that they don't move as quickly as women's hair. Right now, the really interesting trend towards is more product, textured look. On the women, you see a lot of side parts or more glossy, slicked-back hair with product.

A lot of your job is doing editorial work with celebrities. Any new clients?

One of the most challenging things is not being able to see their hair because of a movie or TV show they're filming at the same time. I can't take like with Justin Timberlake when he was filming The Social Network and with Ed Westwick when Gossip Girl is shooting. Sometimes it's just a bad haircut, but you have to be on site, and you have to be on scene pretty much to be in a film.

So, you can really use product to hide a multitude of sins.

Any Komorowski haircuts or styling pieces of advice when understanding of hair and styling comes to your hair experience in the beauty industry? With men and women alike, the primary focus is creating a look that's unique, but also, they understand the importance of achieving an effective, personal appearance for men and women that enhances the inner confidence of a woman.

Any Komorowski in the men's collection hair style and men's grooming experience? (Elvis) (Elvis)
