Skylar Samuels

She grew up crushing on Nick Jonas and now it blows her mind that he's one of her costars. "My inner 13-year-old is doing backflips," says Skylar, 21, who plays Grace Gardner, the leader of the misfits. Her goal: to stage a coup of the Chanel-led Kappa Kappa Tau. "Grace is very inquisitive and doesn't back down from her curiosity," she explains. "If she's determined to get answers, she will get them—even if it means putting herself in danger." Skylar brings real-life sorority experience to her role: She's in Kappa Alpha Theta at Stanford. "I thought my sorority was wild until I met Kappa Kappa Tau. It's crazier, but the female politics are very real. No matter if you're a student or an adult, you're always faced with that girl-on-girl dynamic. It can be brutal." Her coping tip? "The best advice I've ever gotten came from Miss Keke Palmer: Seek compassion and empathy with the other person. You have to practice it, but little by little, you feel less and less affected."

Beauty Tip

A dusting of pearlescent powder (try Dior Diorskin Nude Cosmopolite Illuminating Face Powder, $45, dior.com) on cheekbones will have you totally lighting up the room.

Keke Palmer

When she first read the script for the horror-comedy, Keke, 22, was thrilled to find out her character, misfit Zayday, isn't too serious. "She isn't a joker, but she has a bit of a funniness to her," says the actress, a self-described "very silly person." She's also very mindful. "I'm a big meditator. I do 20 minutes every morning and every afternoon." Given that her full-time job is a frightfest, what's her biggest fear? "Not allowing myself to flourish as a person. I always remind myself to be curious. You don't ever want to lose that passion and zest for life."

Billie Lourd

Here's all Billie is allowed to tell us about her character, Chanel #3: She's part of the The Chansels, the mean-girl clique led by Emma Roberts; she doesn't say much to start; and she wears earmuffs all the time. "But then this huge secret comes out about her," the NYU grad teases. "She's dark. I'm always thinking, Is my resting bitch face bitchy enough or am I resting too much?" She was a lot friendlier when it came to bonding with costar Ariana Grande off-screen. "We went camping—well, glamping—in Santa Barbara," says Billie, 23. "We rented a boat, ate cheese and salami, did some beading. Ariana brought all the crafts! She's the realest chick I've ever met."

TWO SIRs, WITH LOVE

Sir Ian McKellen and Sir Patrick Stewart—who are starring on Broadway in repertory together starting November 24 in two benchmark plays of the 20th century, Harold Pinter's No Man's Land and Samuel Beckett's Waiting for Godot—are old friends and contemporaries who have a great deal in common.

They are mutant rivals Magneto and Professor X in the X-Men movies. And, as the Brits tend to be, they were both versed on Shakespeare. McKellen achieved early acclaim as a great classical actor following his stage-struck years at Cambridge University, while Stewart was a yeoman member of the Royal Shakespeare Company for 16 years before Captain Jean-Luc Picard of the starship Enterprise made him internationally famous. They starred in a play together as long ago as the 1977 premiere of Tom Stoppard and André Previn's Every Good Boy Deserves Favour, and both possess The Voice—that effortless British speciality of projecting one's voice so that it rolls and rips through the back wall of the theater and, on occasion, stops ships at sea.

In No Man's Land, Pinter's 1975 comedy of menace and memory, McKellen plays Spooner, a failed poet gone to seed, and Stewart is Hirst, an upper-class literary gent and alcoholic. In Beckett's 1953 masterpiece, Waiting for Godot—about whose two acts it was once said that nothing happens twice—the renowned knights play its now mythic tramps, Estragon and Vladimir, living in eternal hope of salvation in their own no-man's-land. —JOHN HEILPERN

ASHLEY

Un petit nez retroussé et des yeux de chat (on) avec sa tête de jolie fée mutine. Ashley Greene est devenue en un tournemain via son rôle dans le carton vampiresque Twilight une des stars des ados Outre-Atlantique.

GREEN

Dans cette histoire d'amour d'autant plus passionnée qu'elle est impossible entre deux lycéens dont l'un est un vampire, elle joue le rôle d'Alice Cullen, sœur du héros Edward Cullen, une jeune femme-vampire qui lit dans les pensées. Elle kiffe bien sûr, mais ne semble pas plus que ça "hystérique" par le phénomène. Pourtant, à l'instar de toute "victime" d'une soudaine success story, elle aurait largement pu. Car son destin a tout du conte de fée : une jeune (elle est née en 1987) et sage et studieuse élève de Jacksonville, Floride, qui, parce qu'elle est jolie et (arriment) bien rouée, commence à faire un peu de mannequinat, qui depuis toujours idolâtre Audrey Hepburn (elle regarde "Breakfast at Tiffany's" en boucle) et Johnny Depp en l'ajoutant secrètement sur une carrière à Hollywood. Et qui voit son rêve devenir réalité ! Repérée en 2006, elle fait ses armes dans "Home of the Brave" avec Samuel L. Jackson, Jessica Biel et Christina Ricci, pas des vachement inconnus donc, puis enchaine en 2007 avec "Kings of California" (aux côtés de Michael Douglas tout de même), avant de faire un crochet par quelques séries télé locales. Puis c'est la consécration l'année dernière avec "Twilight" (dont on attend le second volet en France cet automne, et le troisième en 2010). Depuis, elle continue sur une jolie lancée, puisqu'elle a tourné quatre nouveaux films, qui sortiront aux États-Unis entre la fin de cette année et le courant de l'année prochaine. Bref, elle n'a pas vraiment chômé... Un petit an quand même ? "En ce moment, mon mec, c'est ma carrière", rit-elle. Mais quand on voit son beau sourire tout frais et ses yeux et de bonheur, on devine que tout cela semble merveilleusement lui convenir. ■

Location: Mackinac Island is a 4-square-mile National Historical Landmark located on Lake Huron between Michigan's upper and lower peninsulas.

Getting there: The island is accessible only by ferry or plane.

Getting around: Cars are forbidden on Mackinac Island—transportation is provided by horse and carriage, bicycle, or your own two feet.

Where to stay: Located high on a bluff overlooking the straits of Mackinac, the Grand Hotel is the world's largest summer hotel. Its classic Victorian architecture was the backdrop for such films as This Time for Keeps (1947), starring Esther Williams (for whom the hotel's pool is named), and Somewhere in Time (1980), starring Christopher Reeve.

The Legend of Alice Braga

If you don't remember Alice Braga (her first name is pronounced ah-lee-see), it's probably because the last time you saw her, you were looking at her back—tanned, glistening, and perfectly curved, beckoning you to the beaches of Rio from the poster for the Academy Award-nominated film City of God. Well, this is Alice's face. And you should get acquainted with it, because on top of this month's I Am Legend (in which she plays opposite Will Smith), she has recently filmed projects with Sean Penn, Harrison Ford, and Jude Law. It's a lot for a 24-year-old from São Paulo to handle: "All these names—every night I go to bed thinking, Oh, my God, this is phenomenal." Her strangest encounter? Meeting Tim Allen on the set of David Mamet's Redbelt. "He was really goofy, but not just goofy-goofy, sort of...intelligent-goofy," she says. "All he wanted to talk about was South American politics. I never thought I would be talking about Lula and Chávez with Tim Allen!" Um, neither did we.—MARK KIRBY

CATALINA SANDINO MORENO

AGE 24 HOMETOWN Bogotá, Colombia

Some actresses would ride an Academy Award nomination straight to the next big blockbuster. But Catalina, who got an Oscar nod for her heart-wrenching performance as a teen drug runner in the indie drama Maria Full of Grace, fought the pressure to supersize her career. Next, she stars as "a determined woman who fights for what she wants" in the independent flick Fast Food Nation, an exposé of the junk-food biz. "I waited a long time after Maria to pick a project," says Catalina. "Now I have a really good movie that I love and believe in."

HOLLYWOOD MOMENT "At the gym, a naked woman introduced herself to me while she was drying off after a shower. She said, 'Oh, my God, you're the girl from Maria.' I was thinking, 'Cover yourself!'"

THE SAME FIVE
QUESTIONS WE ALWAYS ASK:

No.21
Rufus WAINWRIGHT

This music legend-in-the-making is pumped on karma, Wagner operas and electroshock therapy.

Rufus Wainwright is the closest thing our generation has to a dashing, old-world, Oscar Wilde type. (Plus, he deserves props for being openly gay in the music industry.) For his new record, Release the Stars, the 33-year-old Canadian traveled to Berlin for inspiration. "I started visiting rococo palaces and listening to Wagner operas, and became inundated in German romanticism," Rufus says. "So when I went into the studio, [that mood] kind of took over." The resulting album is grand, cinematic and an instant classic. And I'm not just saying that to make up for the awkward moment when I referred to his recent re-creation of a 1961 Judy Garland concert at Carnegie Hall as "that Liza thing you did." —Joshua

1. What word makes you cringe? Like. I think there should be little electric-shock things put in people's bodies, and every time they say it inappropriately, they get electrocuted.

2. Craziest place you've ever had sex? Oh God, I've had sex in a lot of crazy places. I would have to say my mom's bed when I was 14.

3. If you were invisible for one day and could spy on a famous person, who would it be? I'd probably be boring and choose Colin Farrell.

4. What do you think happens when you die? I think you receive a pass to a revenge amusement park.

5. Would you rather do a duet with Britney Spears or Jessica Simpson? Britney, by far. I love her. I think she's the emblem of our times.

PHOTOGRAPHY BY MATTHEW BROOKES

Yeah, yeah, "Rufus on fire"—too obvious. Although he looks super-dashing in this Marc Jacobs jacket, Tim Hamilton shirt, Earnest Sewn jeans, Thom Browne tie and his own rings.
