"I don't know what got into me, but I marked the date I would be old enough on my calendar, and I made my parents take me back when I was nine," he said. He soon landed on the competitive circuit, and after graduating high school in 2011, he began an unforgiving practice schedule that sent him to train twice a day, six days a week. He didn't medal in London, so he's already focused on the 2016 Games in Rio de Janeiro. But first: college (with a class schedule that can accommodate the demands of walking the Marc by Marc Jacobs runway show, we presume). And guess what Imboden is studying at St. John's University in New York? "Business," he proclaims. "It's a wide field. Originally, I wanted to get involved in the music industry and have my own label, but now that I've been doing more fashion stuff, I'm thinking about that, too." (Did we mention he also moonlights as a DJ?) Even though Imboden navigates the kind of hyper-packed life of the exceptionally ambitious, he seems to remain inspirationally laid-back. At the Olympics, he recalls, "I definitely saw athletes who were up at 5 a.m. every day, four weeks before the competition, spazzing out." So how did he handle the pressure? "I slept well. But I always sleep well." ASHLEY BAKER
