BEST & BRIGHTEST STYLE

Black is standard and mid-weight blue is shrewd, but a charcoal gray tends to prove itself more often. You'll want wool and cashmere blends (12/10) by Calvin Klein Collection, cotton-canvas oxford (13/10) by Salvatore Ferragamo, wool-and-cashmere bow tie (13/10) by J. Mendel. Casual, mother-of-pearl and set (13/10) by Thomas Pink. Jet-set and diamond cuff links (12/10) by Malibu Collection.

BENJAMIN WALKER, 28
ACTOR

There are no jazz hands in the musical Bloody Bloody Andrew Jackson. There are fiftynights, and slashing guitar riffs, and a portrait of our seventh president as a poor addict, fist-bumping alpha bros, but there are none of the jazz hands that can make musical theater so entertaining for everyone involved. Plus, there's Benjamin Walker, the actor who's been singing and dancing as Jackson since the show's workshopping days in 2007. He passed on a plum role in the next K&A movie to debut the character on Broadway this fall, and it's really just as well. He's now got eight chances a week to show just how much he's an actor, can raise.

What it comes in fall here, too, you have options. It can be small and tight, as shown here. Or, you can go for a more relaxed look (12/10). Some evening shirts (12/10), and silk bow tie (13/10) by Calvin Klein Collection (13/10) by Giorgio Armani, evening shirt and suspenders (13/10) by David Vanaman.

BEST & BRIGHTEST STYLE

DEREK CIANFRANCE, 34
WRITER, DIRECTOR

It took twelve years, sixty-something drafts, and 1,224 sketched-out storyboards for this writer-director to get his second film, Blue Valentine, off the ground and into the sun-down art-house theater near you. As festivalgoers across the country have learned since it premiered at Sundance earlier this year, this quiet drama about a man (Ryan Gosling) and woman (Michelle Williams) who fall in love and then part in the most authentic depiction of a shitty marriage in recent memory. All Cianfrance's waiting, and his knack for capturing and conveying the sad details of life as it slowly comes undone, is finally paying off.

There's a lightweight patterned scarf around your neck and the finger all about it. One button wool-and-silk shirt (12/10) by Burberry, cotton evening shirt (13/10) by Thom Browne, wool-and-silk scarf (13/10) and silk bow tie (13/10) by Thomas Pink, jeans-leather shoes (13/10) by Giorgio Armani.

BRAD RICHARDS
ST. LOUIS

HIGH POINT OF LAST SEASON: Power-play goal, with only 11 seconds left in game five of the Eastern Conference semi. (Game went into overtime. Richards won.)

ON HIS (OTHER) SHIRT: "We have to wear suits to every game, and where you live in New York and you're exposed to fashion, it's fun to play around with the different styles."

ON THE LIMITS OF A LUCKY SUIT: "I've won a big game, you'll remember that day and you'll wear it again. It's a superstition thing. This past playoffs, I had a Calvin Klein suit that I wore when we won a couple game seven, and I'd put it back in the closet after the game and I'd see it and I'd see game seven. Calibrating it doesn't always work."

Two-button wool suit ($795) by Joseph Abboud Collection; custom shirt ($295) by Calvin Klein Collection; wool vest ($150) by Jack Spade; leather shoes ($500) by Tom Ford; linen pocket square ($50) by Thomas Pink; leather belt ($145) by Martin Dingman.

ALTUZARRA

"A lot of it came from sport," explains Joseph Altuzarra, holding a bonded leather top inspired by hockey uniforms from his spring collection. "It started with the idea of how to take the functionality of fall into spring." The 27-year-old, Paris-born designer (photographed here with, from left, Claire Courbin Clarins, Lauren Santo Domingo, and cousin Lily Kwong) understands that taste of the modern metropolitan woman whose 24-hour race course lifestyle demands a wardrobe that keeps pace. His signature: "A mix of something very sexy and something very utilitarian as well."

A.A. ANTONIO AZZUOLO

"The basic premise is building a man's wardrobe," explains Montreal-based menswear designer Antonio Azzuolo. Azzuolo, 41 (photographed with actor Ben Barnes), was a sewing machine by age six (his mother was a seamstress, his father, a tailor's apprentice) and went on to Hermès, Kenzo, and, most recently, Ralph Lauren as menswear design director before launching his own line in 2008. Of carefully crafted pieces that cater to the downtown dweller, the result is a harmonious union of zipper and Lower East Side style—classic tailoring fused with off-kilter touches like slightly cropped jackets and rounded shirt collars. "There's a good balance in my collections between my highly tailored pieces and this kind of more forward, edgy casual aspect," he says. "So there's a poetic side and a creative side."

CARLOS CAMPOS

Carlos Campos navigates deftly around his recently opened microboutique on the Lower East Side, pulling out pima cotton polo shirts in hand-dyed deep sea blues. "We play a bit with color because we like basics," says the 38-year-old menswear designer. L.A.-born photographer with musician Theophilus London, who hails from Honduras and hopes to open ten stores—mostly in South America—within the next five years. "The ideal customer is a guy like me, who really appreciates the details. I cannot design something if I'm not thinking about how it's going to be constructed." Campos creates all of his patterns and colors himself, which determines both his bottom-line and his schedule: "I think that's the reason why I'm in business. I save a lot of money making everything myself. I have this little calendar that says, 'Today I have to make patterns, three patterns.' When it's something fun, I do it on Saturday or Sunday." In this story: Production design by Nick Oso Jarama at Mary Howard Studio.
