André Balazs | Hotelier

Making it in the hotel business requires vision, nerve and, of course, style; all of which André Balazs, shown here on his office balcony in New York, has in spades. His empire — including the Chateau Marmont, Meerib and Raleigh hotels, as well as the more affordable Standard hotels and the budget-level, about-10-open Hotel QT (see Page 146) — will soon include two Manhattan apartment buildings: one by Jean Nouvel, the other by Richard Gluckman. A New York branch of the Standard, designed by James Stewart Polshek & Partners, will bridge part of the old High Line railway site. Each of Balazs's hotels offers a different aesthetic experience, but they all reflect his belief that he's not just selling a room, but rather "an emotional connection."
