NAOUMIE
 CAMEROONIAN

Is there an iconic
 Cameroonian beauty aid?
 If there were one, all the everything from stretchers to dry patches, it's palm oil.
 I have memories of my grandmother using it on me from the time when I was very little.
 Which part of the palm tree is the oil from?
 The kind that's good for skin comes from the kernel, which you wash after removing it from the middle of the fruit.
 Have you found palm oil in the States?
 My pair of is harder to find, though it's added to water beauty products. But soap containing honey for moisture is hard to come by.
 While natural, it's lighter and less oily—and you can use it on cuticles, scalp, hair, and body for all-over softness.
 Are there times when you still have to use your palm oil?
 In the dead of winter, when you're more itchy than that, that's when I'm using it.

THAT SOMETHING SPECIAL

We always love finding the next great thing
 when it comes to beauty, but sometimes true comfort and results come from returning to our roots. Here, six women share their ancestral beauty secrets, with recipes to make and indulgent products to try.

ANN
 IRISH AMERICAN

Are you a traditionalist when it comes to your beauty routine?
 Yes. Like my mom and grandma, it's incredibly simple: Wash your face, apply lotion, and always use sunscreen.

Any special treatments?
 There is a drink that several of the women
 in my family were big fans of: skin-clearing barley water. The hairdresser recipe still circulates on a tabloid index card.

What are the directions?
 Boil 2½ quarts of water in a large saucepan.
 Add ½ cup of pearl barley, cover, and simmer for one hour. Strain, and add the fruit of 2 lemons and 6 teaspoons of the barley water. Add brown sugar to taste.

How often should you partake?
 I keep a bottle of it cooling in the fridge.
 A glass a day is supposed to be good for digestion as well as your skin.

138 TOWN & COUNTRY

MARCH 2009 143

Jean Paul Gaultier brings the goddess down to earth. This gray jersey dress ($1,795), from a recent collection of dance-inspired looks, is all about ease of movement, even with its careful draping. John Hardy bamboo, sterling-silver and multistone Cindy Collection cuffs (top, $4,800; bottom, about $6,000). Opposite: Donna Karan New York's silk-cotton top and skirt, worn with a menswear-inspired oversized jacket ($2,895) by the same designer, appear to be two separate items, but they're really one dress ($2,295). Fashion can't get any easier than that! OM Collections silver bangles ($700 each) and green-garnet and red-coral rings ($1,250 each). For shopping information, see page 148.

Hair by Stephen Rose for Rodden at Art Department. Makeup by Lesame Hersh for Face Stockholm at Kramer & Kramer. Set design by Mark Chandler. Antique stool (pages 138 and 143) from Paula Rubenstein Ltd., NYC.

soft neutrals

Delicious shades of cream and champagne in delicate fabrics are always feminine and romantic—and they mix and match readily. Ralph Lauren Collection silk-charmeuse Josie top ($1,395) and silk Madalyn pants ($1,535); Burberry metal flower necklace ($1,995)

light metal

Gentle, subdued metallics bring elegant luster to any wardrobe. Calvin Klein Collection silver mesh top ($1,595), shiny twill skirt ($695) and nickel-plated belt (price on request); Jack Vertanen diamond earrings ($12,000). OPPOSITE: The pencil skirt, with its tight, shapely silhouette, has been a fashion staple for years. Paired with artful embroidery, it becomes a whole new way of dressing up. Dolce & Gabbana silk top ($1,350) and embroidered silk skirt ($1,395); Be & D washed-goatskin belt ($360). On right arm: Henry Dunay coral and diamond bracelet (second from left: $119,830); Mark Davis vintage-Bakelite and multi-stone bangles ($1,440–$8,900). On left arm, from left: De Griengone ginkgo-leaf and diamond cuff ($14,900); Henry Dunay 18k-gold and diamond braided bracelet ($45,900); Mark Davis vintage-Bakelite and multi-stone bangles ($3,200 and $3,400); Christian Louboutin heels ($895).

Au cœur de la vallée de l'Hudson, dans l'État de New York, la réserve de Mohonk - décor de cette série mode - est un trésor de nature, un parc naturel protégé depuis 1869, entouré de plateaux rocheux et survolé par des faucons pèlerins. Au programme, à seulement 1 h 30 de Manhattan, de longues journées de trekking et des soirées autour de feux de camp.
