Jon Hamm's Hair Isn't Full of Secrets—It's Dry Shampoo

By Kate Branch
January 13, 2017

Traditionally when we talk about celebrities getting "red-carpet ready," the conversation is about women. The topic is so ubiquitous there's even been a movement to direct reporters' questions for actresses away from it. You know, that little thing called "Ask Her More?"

But what's rarely discussed is the entire army of groomers behind Hollywood's leading men—a wildly talented crew, many of whom are women, that's tasked with making sure their clients aren't the butt of a self-tanner meme. Because, yes, lots of spray tans are involved. Concealer and dry shampoo, too!

Here, we caught up with four stylists—plus, the men they make glow—to hear more about what goes on behind the scenes when guys get ready for the cameras. From the TMI (nose hair trimming) to stuff that'll truly make you jealous (La Mer regimens), these routines might not be fraction of what most of us go through on a given day, but they sure are fascinating.

Groomer Kim Verbeck, 46, and actor Jon Hamm, 45, started working together long before Don Draper was even a thing. "It was 2006, on an Interview magazine shoot, and Mad Men hadn't yet debuted," says Hamm. "Kimmy has been 'my people' ever since."

"I remember the third time we worked together," says groomer Marissa Machado, 33, of Bleed for This actor Miles Teller, 29. "It was for 21 & Over, and I came in the room and said, 'Nice to see you,' and he goes, 'So, are you, like, my girl now?' " That was four years ago, and she's still by his side, cutting hair, blotting shine....

GLAMOUR: Do you two ever peruse Getty Images and think, Nailed it!

Miles Teller: The Oscars [in 2015, for Whiplash]. Dug it.

Marissa Machado: Oh my God, yes! But that was a stressful situation. It was Miles' first time attending, so he had a few nerves, as did I! We had a few disagreements, a slight panic, but in the end we worked it out: structured hair—a big movie star moment.

GLAMOUR: Any red-carpet hacks? Self-tanner a yes or no?

MT: I'd say yes. Because you can feel like shit, and everyone is like, "Oh my God, you look amazing!"

Defined brows, radiant skin, and supple lips aren't just the hallmarks of a polished no-makeup look — they're also the signature aesthetic of the groomers for Hollywood's finest man mugs. Like your favorite actresses, male celebrities have a beauty team on hand to keep their brows tamed and their skin shine-free for big events and photo shoots, too. (We're looking at you, Nick Jonas, Rami Malek, and Michael B. Jordan.) And if you're American Horror Story star Cody Fern, your groomer also adorns your lids with fierce smoky eye makeup for awards shows.

We asked five men's groomers to share the beauty products they always keep in their kits for prepping the skin of their celebrity clients as well their makeup staples for filling in brows, adding a subtle flush to cheeks, and disguising dark circles. You're sure to find some Allure Best of Beauty Award winners and even a beloved Glossier product on their list of essentials.

Rami Malek Is a Glowing Snack With Flawless Foundation at the 2019 Oscars

Makeup artist Marissa Machado breaks down the Best Actor champion's "chef's kiss" perfect red carpet complexion look.

BY SABLE YONG
February 25, 2019

The 2019 Oscars may mark the end of awards season, but it also definitely confirms the fact that people really, really liked Rami Malek. He went from being lauded for being a reclusive hacker in Mr. Robot to being lauded for being one of rock music's greatest legends for his portrayal of Freddie Mercury in biopic Bohemian Rhapsody (also nominated for Best Picture at the Oscars). The dude has range, and thusly he's been up to his eyeballs in nominations and wins, winning a Golden Globe for Best Actor in a Drama, again for Bohemian Rhapsody.

Now that Malek's face is becoming more of a red carpet familiar, that face is getting the red carpet treatment. Like all dudes wearing variations of the same suit to various awards shows, they want to look flawless for the photo pit, and that's where men's groomers come in. If you think these dudes walking the red carpet are not wearing a fuckton of concealer, setting powder, and probably brow gel, then you are dead wrong. Last year, Daniel Kaluuya proudly wore Fenty Beauty to the Oscars and everyone was like, "Wait, dudes wear foundation?" Hell yeah, they do. You think HD cameras won't catch the glister of all that stress sweat under the Los Angeles sun? HD is the digital saboteur of complexions, I tell you what.

Anyway, back to Rami's beautiful, award-winning face. The keeper of that red carpet mug is Marissa Machado, who has been Malek's groomer throughout the Bohemian Rhapsody press tour and the subsequent awards show circuits. The Oscars are the Big Game though, and she's got all the hits on hand.

I asked Machado how she and Malek come up with a look for events like awards shows and press tours, to which she mentioned that they both agree that adding a bit of warmth to his skin is the move. "I just really love to have his skin be nice and warm — I never want him to look washed out," she tells Allure.

Like the Golden Globes, Machado prepped Rami's skin with Kosas Cosmetics Tinted Face Oil in Shades 5 and 6 mixed together for overall warmth. Then, Machado applied EX1 Delete Fluide Concealer in shade 5 just in areas with a bit of discoloration to even out his skin tone. And then she set his complexion with EX1 Invisible Compact Powder in shade 4 and Kosaport LipFuel in Baseline (aka clear) was swiped on his lips to keep them hydrated throughout the event (and probably all the lip-biting the Best Actor nominee will likely be doing while waiting for his fate to be announced). [ETA: Achem, I mean Best Actor WINNER and good thing for that lip balm because, wow — that smooching.]

Machado mentioned that it's a pet peeve of hers when the ears and neck don't match, so she makes sure to dab any complexion makeup or bronzer on those areas as well, "otherwise it's just like a floating head." As for the hair on that head, she doesn't do anything too fussy. "[Rami's] hair is a bit straighter now so I just go with that; I just like his hair to have a nice shine to it so when flashes go off, it looks classic and clean. I like his hair to sit a bit higher than he would probably prefer, but we agree on where it looks best!" The whole shebang takes about half an hour. To get red carpet ready for the Oscars. Can you believe?? (That's on top of all the hubbub from everyone else in the prep room on Team Rami — publicists, family, friends, etc.)

As for touch-ups, Machado is all about a nicely folded tissue to dab any excess shine and sweatiness away. "I'm not a fan of blotting papers honestly — something about the oil sheets kind of grosses me out. I think a tissue is much more discreet and easy."

"It's such a special day for him in his career," Machado adds. "I just wanted him to look classic and handsome."

As the on-staff snack expert at Allure, I'd say: Nailed it.

Best Actor Winner Rami Malek Debuted a New Beauty Product on the Golden Globes Red Carpet

We stan a Golden Globe winner & his tinted face oil.

BY LEAH PRINZIVALLI

January 7, 2019

True awards season beauty stans will vividly remember the moment at the 2018 Oscars when Beyoncé walked down the red carpet in a never-before-seen eye shadow. In a perfectly executed feat of public relations, Glossier Lid Star Eye Shadow was thus introduced to the world. As of Sunday night's Golden Globes, Rami Malek is lucky enough to have something in common with Beyoncé.

Malek, who won the Golden Globe for Best Actor in a Drama for his role as Freddie Mercury in Bohemian Rhapsody, used his moment in the sun to do more than bring home a trophy. He also brought us a new beauty product. It turns out that Malek's kissable (did I say that?) lips were courtesy of Kosas Kosasport Lip Fuel, a lip balm that won't hit shelves until February.

And that dewy skin? All thanks to Kosas Tinted Face Oil, a hydrating, medium-coverage foundation that at least one Allure editor is wearing at this very moment. (For the curious, makeup artist Marissa Machado used light-medium to medium shades 4 and 5 on Malek.)

"Rami's look tonight emulated Classic Hollywood," Machado said in a statement. "I went with modern leading man hair and warm sun kissed skin."

While beauty editor inboxes flood with style tip sheets and hair and makeup breakdowns post-awards shows, it's still rare for a male celeb to share the "get the look" details we're accustomed to receiving from their better halves. Last year, for one, Daniel Kaluuya attended the Oscars in a face of Fenty. But the beauty breakdowns are still rare enough to stand out in a stacked inbox, and we want to see more of them in 2019. Kudos to Malek for bringing the beauty heat — which, incidentally, as just as Freddie Mercury would have wanted it.

Nick Jonas' Groomer Marissa Machado Reveals What It's Like Working With Him – EXCLUSIVE

BY KRISTEN PERRONE | DEC 3 2018 | f

Do your friends tell you you're 'celeb obsessed'? Do you follow your favorite celebs' every move? Know their Instagram histories so well that you can rattle off their inner circle by name and IG handle? If yes, Elite Daily's new series, SideClique, is just for you. We're bringing you everything you've ever wanted to know about the people living their lives right alongside our favorite celebs.

If you've ripped out pics from a magazine shoot of Nick Jonas in the last decade, chances are that you're already familiar with the grooming work of Marissa Machado. After first assisting another men's groomer working with a then-growing sensation called the Jonas Brothers, she has been behind youngest brother Nick's camera-ready looks since he was 15.

Consistently working with both Nick and Joe Jonas, celebrity men's groomer Machado also counts Bohemian Rhapsody star Rami Malek and Dirty John headliner Eric Bana as some of her clients. Her responsibilities focus on preparing male celebrities' hair and skin for public events, junkets, and photo shoots. But as with anyone aspiring toward big Hollywood dreams, Machado paid her dues before becoming a top groomer. While hustling for industry connections, she attended cosmetology school and worked at a Nordstrom makeup counter, jumping at any special opportunity that arose.

"One day I got in at an agency on an assisting job and then I was just doing different gigs here and there," Machado says. "I was asked if I wanted to assist another men's groomer called Catherine Furniss. My agent said at the time [that the client] was this boy band that he's kind of heard of [and] they're called the Jonas Brothers."

Up to date with her celebrity news, Machado had an inkling that the band would climb toward success, and her career clicked into place after she began to work with the brothers. While taking care of their touring looks and grooming them for talk show and magazine appearances, her name began to stand out within the film and TV industry. "From then on out, I just started working with men and that's how people sort of knew me in the business, so I just went with it," she says. "And I'm so happy that I did."

After following the Jonas Brothers through their Disney heyday, Machado grew particularly close to Nick after the trio split in 2013. As his groomer, she frequently traveled with him, and Jonas became a source of comfort when Machado was experiencing difficult times. "He's just very much about, 'Stay true to who you are, don't worry, don't let anyone else sort of bring you down,'" she shares. "The people you're around are the people you become closest to, and I really just consider him one of my best friends."

Of course, all friendships have their rocky patches, and Machado's time with the "Close" singer is no exception. Machado tells me of one time in particular. When planning to receive a spray tan for a TV role, Jonas asked Machado to also give his girlfriend a tan as well. But when Machado arrived at his home for the appointment, Jonas said he no longer needed a tan, but asked Machado to wait for his girlfriend and still spray on her tan.

"I went to text my boyfriend at the time and said, 'Ugh, she's still not here, still waiting. I'm so annoyed, and Nick isn't even getting a tan,'" Machado says. "And as I hit send, I hear it ding on [Nick's] phone ... on the other side of the wall."

We've all been in her shoes before, but Machado's text snafu had a happier ending than most of our mistakes probably have. "He said, 'You know what, Marissa, don't worry about it, it's rude, I feel bad.'"

The internet is still reeling from Jonas' double dose of wedding ceremonies with new wife Priyanka Chopra, but before the couple's big day(s), Machado always knew that fans could expect to see the groom rock a classic Jonas look. As seen in photos from the wedding festivities, Jonas sported a beard and the short, voluminous hair that still hints at his waves of yesteryear. Ahead of the wedding weekend, Machado also groomed her friend for his appearance alongside Chopra on the first digital cover of Vogue.

"He knows what he wants, he always has a clear vision, and it's really nice because sometimes we collab, sometimes he leans on me, but sometimes it's just, 'Hey, this is what I want,'" the groomer shares. Speaking to Elite Daily about two weeks before the wedding, she was confident that Jonas' look on his big day wouldn't be too surprising to longtime fans. "I have a feeling that that day we're just gonna stick to what we know, just to keep it classic, because I feel like those photos are forever and you always want to look like yourself."

Now with Jonas off the market, Machado has advice for anyone wanting to emulate his style with their boyfriends or themselves. "As far as hair products go, what's nice these days is that places like CVS and Target have great hair lines that they're carrying there that I think are really affordable. You don't need to spend $30 on a paste, you can spend $13 and have it last a long time."

At the end of the day, Machado thrives from her job's unique qualities. "I know it's so cliché, but I do feel so lucky to wake up every day and be excited about my job," she says. "It's fun, it's different, I get to meet people, I never get bored. I know it's not luck because I did have to work really hard to get here, but my dad always said, 'Luck is the definition when opportunity meets perseverance.' I think that's definitely true here."

My, oh my, did we have some beauties on the red carpet this weekend!

For those who missed the 2019 Critic's Choice Awards, your favorite stars from the big and small screen came together at the Barker Hangar in Santa Monica for one unforgettable party.

After the awards were handed out and the red carpet closed, pop culture fans couldn't help but talk all things fashion and beauty.

We here at E! News were no different as we praised Charlize Theron's hairstyle and Mandy Moore's beauty eye shadow. And yes, even some gentlemen impressed us with their smooth skin. We see you Rami Malek.

After some admiring, we came up with a few of our favorite beauty looks of the night.

For the Critic's Choice Awards, groomer Marissa Machado says the Bohemian Rhapsody star went "with a bit of a retro feel." ## The Jonas Brothers Just Gave Fans a Big Reason to See Their Tour at 2019 Billboard Music Awards

by MIKE VULPO | Wed., 1 May, 2019 5:13 PM

2019 is the year for the Jonas Brothers.

Before Nick Jonas, Kevin Jonas and Joe Jonas took to the stage and performed at the 2019 Billboard Music Awards in Las Vegas, the band couldn't help but share how excited they were at the future.

Yes, their new music continues to climb the charts. And you better believe fans are excited for a new tour that was just announced.

But there's also a new album coming out titled Happiness Begins that truly symbolizes where these artists are in life.

"We worked with a lot of really talented writers and producers. In the sessions, we'd walk in, say we're trying to bottle happiness and bring it to the world," Nick explained on Live From the Red Carpet with Jason Kennedy and Tanya Rad. "There's so much negativity out there and if we can provide a little light in people's eyes, we're doing our job."

He continued, "That's the space we're all in. We're all happy. Living our best life at the moment with each other as family and connecting again with our extended families. We want to give that to the world."

That joy is certainly seen and felt in their music video for "Sucker." Their significant others Priyanka Chopra, Danielle Jonas and Sophie Turner were all part of the special project.

To say it was a fun day would be an understatement.

"It was a blast. It was the easiest day of work because there was no like, 'Hello, nice to meet you,'" Joe explained to us. "We're literally with our best friend...It was the best music video I think we could have ever wished for."

And when asked why fans are so freaking excited for this next chapter, the guys—who were all groomed by Marissa Machado for the show—give credit to the music.

"We've heard a lot of stories recently how this has been a soundtrack to a lot of people's lives. For us, you can think of so many bands and artists in your life and you go, 'Yeah I remember this break up. I remember this great day for me.' And I think a lot of these songs might be that for our fans," Joe shared. "So it is just a celebration as well. Being back with these fans and familiar faces, new faces, too. It does feel like it's going to be the best tour we've ever put on."

Best Beauty at MTV Movie & TV Awards 2019: See Tessa Thompson, Lizzo and More Winning Looks

by MIKE VULPO | Mon., Jun. 17, 2019 6:00 PM

Summer is here and Hollywood is bringing the heat to the red carpet!

At the 2019 MTV Movie & TV Awards, your favorite stars from both the movie and TV world came together to celebrate some of the best pop culture moments of the year. But before any award was handed out, there was a special tradition that couldn't be ignored.

Oh yes, the red carpet was open with more than a few glamorous looks.

Instead of focusing on the dresses and accessories, we decided to dive into just some of the hair and makeup looks that left us stunned.

From Tiffany Haddish's "sophisticated bob" to Lala Kent's "berry soft smokey eye," many stars and their glam squads deserve credit for creating some beauty moments.

We got in touch with some of the hairstylists and makeup artists who graciously gave us some secrets into how the looks were made.

Take a look at our gallery below for all the details and how you may be able to recreate the look at home.

ZACHARY LEVI

Celebrity groomer Marissa Machado wanted the award show host's red carpet look to be "modern and sharp." In addition to keeping his fade hairstyle tight using KYN texture spray and V76 matte clay, Marissa "wanted his skin warm with a little masculine glow. To get this look, I prepped his skin with Skyn Iceland and finished it off with Tom Ford bronze gel." Not a bad complement for that handsome mint suit.

Conceal blemishes, fight shine, and more

Brands like Chanel and War Paint are placing bets that makeup is going to become mainstream for men in 2019. They're launching lines that emphasize function, with products ideal for small touch-ups rather than dramatic looks.

To get started, consider these five tips from Los Angeles-based groomer Marissa Machado, who preps clients like Nick Jonas and Rami Malek for the red carpet. The following products are fast and easy to apply, so you can carry them in your gym bag and waste no time en route to your day.

Prevent excess oil.

There's a difference between a natural glow and shine due to excess oil production. To keep your face matte, Machado recommends layering this hydration oil from Peter Thomas Roth or this lightweight cream from Sisley Paris under any makeup products.

Smooth out your complexion.

BB and CC creams and tinted moisturizers all work to provide a consistent, smooth complexion. Machado suggests reaching for a BB \(beauty balm\) cream on a day when you only need light coverage. CC \(color corrector\) creams also provide a lighter layer, but are best for neutralizing redness or irritation. Tinted moisturizers are the most heavy-duty of the three products, with coverage that's comparable to that of a foundation, but with added SPF and moisturizing qualities. Apply any of the above on clean skin or on top of a moisturizer and blend with fingers.

Hide and heal breakouts.

Treat blemishes as you conceal them: this product from Evolution Man uses salicylic acid to help dissolve dead skin cells, unclog pores, and neutralize blackheads and whiteheads.

Warm up dull skin.

After a workout, you might have a redder complexion due to all the blood flow your body managed while you trained. For these moments, Machado likes to apply bronzers to give skin a glow and disguise red cheeks. This膏 from Tom Ford doubles as an oil-free, soothing moisturizer that calms irritation and "mimics the look of a few minutes in the sun," she says.

Thicken sparse hairs.

For her male clients, Machado often focuses on the brows. She reaches for a brow filler like this膏 from the Boy de Chanel line, since it gathers itself around each hair and makes them thicker and bolder. It can also be used to spruce up any patchy or grey spots of facial hair.

Meet the woman behind Rami Malek's Oscar-winning grooming regime

We spoke to the celebrity groomer Marissa Machado to see how she achieved Malek's Academy Award-winning look

Last night was big for Rami Malek. Scooping the coveted Best Actor award at the 2019 Academy Awards, he is the first Arab man to do so and his rise to Oscar glory has been meteoric.

Now cementing himself as certified Hollywood royalty, Malek has perfected his dress sense with ease (and the guidance of celebrity stylist Ilaria Urbinati) and for the 2019 Academy Awards he enlisted the help of Marissa Machado to perfect his look.

Working with the likes of Nick and Joe Jonas, Joe Alwyn and Zachary Levi, Machado has firmly become one of the best male groomers in Tinseltown and she has been on hand throughout awards season to give Malek a helping hand.

With that in mind, we spoke to Machado to see how she achieved an Oscar-worthy look, from what products she used to what she recommends he does post-Oscars afterparty...

GQ: How did you achieve a winning look for Malek?

Marissa Machado: "When I saw Rami's tux, I knew that we needed to keep him looking like the handsome leading man he is, but with a slight edge. We gave him a traditional side part in his hair but with a flair of a cool edge. To touch up parts of his face to even out his skin tone, I used the EX1 Delete Fluide Concealer in shade 5.0 (£10.50. At Boots. boots.com). It's great because it provides a full-coverage finish, is super for blending and is great for giving a more even tone. I then continued to perfect Rami's complexion with the EX1 Invisiwear Compact Powder in 4.0 (£11.50. At amazon.co.uk), a powder that features EX1's signature yellow-gold pigments, which is perfect for Rami's olive skin tone.

"To keep his glow nice and warm, I used the Kosas Tinted Face Oil for a natural, sun-kissed warmth and finished off the look with Kosas Sport Lip Fuel, a great universal balm to keep lips hydrated for both men and women.

"At the end, I used a folded tissue (in lieu of blotting papers) to dab any excess shine and sweatiness away. It's way more discreet and easy versus blotting papers."

What products did you use on the night?

"EX1 Cosmetics Delete Fluide Concealer in 5.0, EX1 Cosmetics Invisiwear Compact Powder in 4.0, Kosas Tinted Face Oil and Kosas Sport Lip Fuel. I'd recommend all!"

What products favour him best?

"Anything that adds warmth to the skin. I just really love to have his skin glowing and warm - I never want him to look washed out. EX1 is really great for skin tones like his. The pigments in the concealer and the powder are spot-on matches for him, making his skin look fresh and even."

How would you describe his skin?

"Rami's skin is a beautiful olive hue, but with the winter months it's important for me to keep it hydrated and also to even out the tone. The EX1 and Kosas products I used at the 2019 Oscars helped do that, creating the natural feeling of warm, sun-kissed skin by evening out the skin and giving it a very natural-looking finish."

I'm sure he celebrated heavily last night - do you have any advice for post-Oscars skincare?

"With awards season in full swing, late nights can lead to tired, puffy eyes. My go-to quick tip for guys is to first apply Radical Dragon's Blood Eye Masks to help with depuffing, followed by EX1's Delete Fluid Concealer, which is super natural-looking, with a synthetic brush to create a fresh and rested look. Or simply, after a night of celebration, I recommend some cooling eye gels and a bag of ice on the face to reduce any puffiness. Followed by some Vitamin C Serum and a very hydrating moisturiser."

Did Malek have any skin treatments or routines in the lead up to the Oscars?

"Daily moisturising to keep his face hydrated always."

Does Malek have a particular grooming regime when off duty?

His off duty routine is very minimal. It's as simple as applying a light wax to his damp hair and a daily moisturiser and eye cream I've provided him with.

Saoirse Ronan and Rami Malek's makeup artists dish on their favorite red carpet foundations

The new, high-performance foundations that get stars like Rami Malek and Saoirse Ronan ready for their close-up.

Which product is the building block of every celebrity makeup artist's kit? Foundation. "Foundation should always fuse seamlessly with skin for the most natural look," says makeup artist Laura Mercier, founder of the cult eponymous brand and pioneer of "the flawless face." But how do stars achieve that perfectly glowy, red carpet-ready skin in the depths of winter, amid a grueling schedule of long haul flights, awards-show mixers and press junkets? With the help of super-charged, breakthrough formulations that do more than just cover and conceal. Below, six celebrity makeup artists share the foundations they turn to for an award-winning complexion.

1. Kosas Tinted Face Oil

"One of my favorite products for the winter months is Kosas Tinted Face Oil," says makeup artist Marissa Machado, who used a blend of shades four and five on Rami Malek at the Golden Globes to lightly even out tone and build a natural feeling of warm, sun-kissed skin. The serum-like formula contains three types of mineral pigment in a base of six active botanical oils to instantly even skin tone, minimize pores and erase imperfections. "It's not only hydrating; it's super lightweight so your skin never feels cakey. It's the perfect coverage with the most natural-looking finish."

Should the Groom Shave His Everyday Facial Hair for the Wedding?

Ultimately, it's up to the man of the hour, but there are some factors to consider.

While it's true that the bride tends to get the most attention on the wedding day, it's important to remember that there are two people getting married. That's why the groom deserves some serious TLC, too. In addition to picking out wedding-day attire that makes you feel great, one important decision you'll need to make as the groom is whether or not you want to walk down the aisle with facial hair. Experts agree that there's no right answer: Some men prefer to be clean shaven on the big day while others think it would be strange to do away with their everyday style.

To decide what's right for you, you should first think about how you want to look—both in real life and in photos that you'll reference for many years to come. While the choice is entirely yours to make, most style experts agree that the groom should try to look the way he normally does. That means not growing out a beard just for this occasion or shaving for this one day only. "If the groom's facial hair is part of his usual appearance then there is no reason he needs to shave it for his wedding," says Madeline Korosec, men's grooming merchant at BirchboxMan. "Just like the bride will want to look like the best version of herself, if the groom's facial hair is part of his identity and makes him feel confident, then he shouldn't make a drastic change for the big day, unless he wants to!"

Josh McBride, entertainment host and lifestyle expert, agrees, adding that a groom should consider what he's most comfortable with. However, if the groom does decide to keep facial hair, McBride recommends taking proper care of your beard or mustache in the months leading up to the celebration. Here, professionals share their best grooming tips for men planning on keeping their everyday facial hair for their wedding.

Enlist the help of a good barber or stylist.

If you don't already have a good barber or stylist on speed dial, now is the time to get one—even if you know you're going to ultimately opt for a clean shave. "An experienced and skilled barber will ensure that you have straight sideburns that will look great for all those pictures you will be taking—not to mention control over your facial hair to eliminate any unwanted waves or shapes if you do have a beard," says Esquire's grooming expert Rob Diaz.

Get a facial.

If you've never had a facial in your life, this is time to start. In fact, Marissa Machado—the celebrity groomer who was responsible for helping Nick Jonas prep for his wedding to Priyanka Chopra—suggests getting your first facial about three months before your wedding, then returning for follow-up visits every 30 days or so. "Getting a basic facial is a great way to clear out any blocked pores, get the circulation and blood flowing as well as hydrate your skin," she says. "It can really make a positive difference in your overall appearance—plus, it feels amazing!"

Wash your face regularly.

Believe it or not, but you should be washing your face twice daily—once in the morning and once at night before bed. Doing so helps clean out pores, even skin tone, and prevent breakouts. This is especially important if you have a beard, as oil, dirt, and grime can more easily get trapped near the hair follicles. Korosec suggests looking for one that removes dirt and oil without drying you out. If you have a beard, you'll want to follow your wash with a beard oil, which Machado says should be applied with a comb to help pull loose strands through.

How to Get Justin Theroux's Tousled Hair and Beard Style

Our January cover star frequently changes his appearance. Justin Theroux routinely teeters between clean-shaven and bearded, as well as slicked back and intentionally disheveled—with a few bestubbed and tousled stops along the way.

Of all his looks, we know Theroux best for his textured, mussed hair, paired with a neatly manicured beard, full as it can be (as seen in our photo shoot with the actor and screenwriter). There's toughness to this combo, and versatility. You could mimic it for the office without having to restyle for happy hour. You could match it with a leather jacket for a night out, or a wool blazer for brunch with the in-laws.

The Best Hairstyles for Your Face Shape »

If you're looking to flatter Theroux and mimic the look—and why wouldn't you?—here's some advice on how to do it best. All expertise comes from LA-based celebrity groomer Marissa Machado, whose clients include Nick and Joe Jonas, Rami Malek, Liam Payne, and more.

The kind of hair it requires

"This hairstyle works best on fine, straighter hair," says Machado. "Straight, weightless hair is more likely to stay standing up [with the product you apply]. A heavier head of hair would wilt over."

If your hair is wavy or curly, however, fret not: Machado says you could quickly straighten it with a flat iron in order to replicate Theroux. (Try Sedu Revolution Styling Iron.) It's also suitable if your hair is thinning, since it errs on the side of disheveled and "imperfect."

"You can use the sides of your hair to push forward, therefore masking a receding hair line," Machado says. "Plus, thinner hair is usually weightless, which will hold up easily [with the styling product]."

How to Get Matthew McConaughey's Signature Wavy Hairstyle »

Should you use a barber or stylist?

Machado says you can visit either the barber or a stylist for this cut, since it's halfway between the two spectrums. She just warns that you need to use scissors all around—even on the tighter sides—so don't let your barber click on their clippers unless it's to clean up your neckline.

How much they cut will be determined by how much hair you have. You should get some texture cut into the top, which will be significantly longer than the sides. It's easily replicated on shorter hair too, though you won't get as much vertical unless the top is a couple inches long, or more.

How to style it

First, Machado says to spray some styling tonic (try V76 by Vaughn Tonic Hair & Scalp) or sea salt spray (try Sachajuan Ocean Mist Spray) into clean, towel-dried (but lightly wet) hair. This will assist with the volume, and make the hair more receptive to the next product you apply.

"Next, blow dry using your fingers for a rough, choppy finish. Make sure to dry the hairs atop the head in an upward direction, using your hand to push the sides forward." This can cover some of your hair recession. (We like Conair 1875-Watt Pro Styler.)

10 Hairstyles for Men Over 40 »

Dry with the cannon in a forward direction, not blowing from the sides, Machado adds. After it's dry and in place, grab some matte pomade (like Byrd Matte Pomade). A penny-sized amount should suffice.

"Make sure to get it into the root and evenly around," Machado says. "Use your hands to perfect the shape. Once you've done that, lock it in place with a light setting spray."

The spray won't make hair brittle and hard, but it will preserve your style for the day.

How to maintain the beard

"Keeping a beard this length—clean but burly—is actually more work than it looks like," Machado warns.

It's manageable, even though you'll need to trim it every two days, on average.

First: "Always keep your face clean above the beard line, using a regular shaving razor (such as Harry's The Winston) or even a straight blade (like Baxter of California Blue Steel 'Not a Replica' Straight Razor) at the barbershop," she says. "This also goes for your neckline."

The 10 Best Hairstyles for Men That Will Never Go Out of Style »

As for preserving the beard shape, Machado recommends combing it into place, then using a standard beard trimmer (try Wahl Beard Cord / Cordless Rechargeable Trimmer) to graze any stray hairs. You can also employ some small, precise facial hair scissors (like Tweezerman Stainless Steel Moustache Scissors) for the task. She then advises using beard oil (like Old Spice Beard Oil) to keep your whiskers hydrated, soft, and with a healthy dose of shine.

The Jonas Brothers' Hair Stylist Spills the 3 Products They Can't Live Without

Kevin Mazur/Getty Images

By: Madison Russell
April 18, 2019

For the past decade, the Jonas Brothers—Joe, Nick and Kevin—have been a part of the cultural conversation, releasing hit albums as a group since 2005 and in separate ventures (namely, Nick Jonas's 2014 hit song "Jealous" and Joe Jonas's 2015 pop band, DNCE) after a band hiatus in 2013.

Six years after the split, the group reunited with the release of "Sucker" on March 1, and they're officially back in full force. In the past month, they've been on heavy press tours, appearing live on The Late Late Show with James Corden and attending the hottest events. Marissa Machado is the woman behind their looks.

Machado is a Los Angeles-based celebrity groomer who has been coiffing the hair of each of the JoBros since 2008. Her work has appeared in editorials, movies, music videos, television series, international music tours and live TV experiences.

While on set with the Jonas Brothers shooting a new editorial, Machado spilled the deets on the guys' favorite grooming products.

V76 Texture Clay

Machado says: "Nick actually introduced me to this and now it has become one of my go-to's for all my clients."

Amazon reviews say: The reviews for this texture clay are through the roof, citing a pleasant smell, easy application and a natural look.

Weleda Cold Cream

Machado says: "This is one of my favorite secret products. I use it on guys' arms or anywhere that skin is showing. It gives the perfect amount of shine."

Amazon reviews say: It's like our expert celeb groomer really knows what she's talking about, because the reviews are glowing. One reviewer says this product is a "skin savior," while another calls it "heavenly."

Skyn Iceland Hydro Cool Firming Eye Gels

Machado says: "I just wrapped up the Shazam press tour with Zachary Levi, and these Skyn Iceland eye patches are a lifesaver. If you're tired or overworked, put these on for 15 minutes and you're good to go."

Amazon reviews say: According to the reviews, these eye gels feel really cool for the first five minutes. Some users suggest storing them in the fridge for added de-puffing.

In an all-black Dior suit and perfectly coiffed hair, actor Rami Malek's look at the 2019 SAG Awards couldn't have been further from Queen's flamboyant frontman Freddie Mercury, but there was one exception: his makeup.

Malek's groomer Marissa Machado wanted to give his skin a kiss of bronze color, swiping on the velvety Kosas Cosmetics Tinted Face Oil before stepping onto the red carpet. "For the SAG Awards, Rami went with a rock and roll vibe," she said. (Fitting.) She used shade 06 — a deep, olive-toned hue — of the formula, which blends three types of mineral pigments with botanical oils to even out his skin tone. The results were so good, you'll barely notice he was wearing anything at all.

Easy come, easy go, now you know his secret to the SAG Awards show.

T3 PROS: HOW TO WASH YOUR HAIR

SHARE

You've been washing your hair for years, but you might be doing it wrong. We asked our T3 Pros for tips on how to wash your hair – the correct way.

Jessica Elbaum, T3Pro

"Correctly washing and conditioning your hair is very important. I usually tell my clients to wash & condition every other day unless they have dry texture. In that case one a week is fine. You should always start with a shampoo that's right for your hair texture. Lather up and rinse, add conditioner to smooth the cuticle and detangle. I highly recommend the T3 Source Shower Head, it gives you the cleanest water possible which makes a big difference in your hair and skin's texture and shine."

Marissa Machado, T3Pro

"Washing our hair is something we do on autopilot, the truth is most of us are doing it incorrectly. Rather than aggressively scrubbing your head it is best to lay your head back and let the water rinse through thoroughly."

Amy Komorowski, T3Pro

"Great hairstyling begins with a proper wash. I'm a big proponent of washing and conditioning hair everyday especially if you are active, work out and in the summer months. If your hair is especially coarse, curly or thick a good rinse and conditioner is all you might need to tame your hair. Get hair wet and use a small amount of shampoo focusing mostly at the roots. Add water to emulsify, make sure to rinse very well. Add conditioner to the ends of the hair and let sit for 1-2 minutes. When I style hair on set I've always tried to use filtered water or spray water like Evian to prep. This is why I'm excited about the T3 Source Shower Head because it filters out harmful chemicals and chlorine, making your hair shinier and the end result – more beautiful hair."

Michelangelo Arevalo, T3Pro

"Your hair should be rinsed in lukewarm water before it is washed in order to loosen the oil and dirt on your scalp. Depending on how much hair you have, you should be shampooing twice a week. The key is to alternate between two different types of shampoo to clarify and cleanse the hair shaft. It's important to invest in a good shampoo. Instead of conditioning, I think it's better to use a masque, comb it through the hair with the wet brush, letting it absorb for a few minutes, then wash it out completely. Additionally, the minerals in our shower water can be so intense on our hair."

The Cool No-Makeup Makeup Products Used on Men on the Oscars Red Carpet

by AMANDA MONTELL

The Oscars red carpet is not typically the venue for no-makeup makeup looks... unless you're a man, that is. Indeed, though it may seem like male celebs show up to award season with innately flawless skin and filled-in brows, their perfected visages come courtesy of a few clever products that offer truly natural results—because heaven forbid it seem obvious that a man is wearing makeup. (Oh, standards of gender presentation. A discussion for a different day.)

Anyway, not every makeup product marketed as offering a natural or undetectable effect delivers on its promises, but we are seriously impressed with the cool products celebrity makeup artists used on famous men like Rami Malek and Henry Golding on the Oscars and SAG Awards carpets this year. If you're into the look of perfect skin and snatched brows without looking like you have any makeup on at all, keep scrolling to check out the beauty products and advice that will make you look as low-key flawless as an A-list dude.

"After seeing Rami's Saint Laurent Tux I immediately knew that I needed to keep his look classic Rami: handsome leaving a cool vibe," said makeup artist Marissa Machado of the Best Actor winner's Oscars beauty look. Machado used the buzzy non-toxic brand Kosas Cosmetics—its hydrating Tinted Face Oil in shades 05 and 06 "to create a natural sun-kissed warmth" and its Kosasport LipFuel in Baseline, "which has been [Rami's] trusted lip hydrator all award season" and will be available soon.

For skincare prep, Rami received a facial from Beverly Hills esthetician Cynthia Franco before hitting the red carpet.

Curls, Mustaches, & Happy Trails: Inside The Life Of Nick Jonas' Groomer

SAMANTHA SASSO
SEPTEMBER 15, 2018, 12:00 PM

It's no secret that our favorite female celebs depend on a team of nail artists, hairstylists, makeup artists, self tanning pros, and facialists to get them "red-carpet ready." But what about the men? Their clean-shaven chins and chiseled jawlines don't necessarily land them on the Best Beauty Looks list, but would you ever guess hours of prep go into those beards, too? The women have boob highlighter, velcro rollers, and \$400 facials, and the men, well, they have groomers.

Groomers are responsible for just about everything that a typical six-person glam squad would do; at least, that's the case for Marissa Machado, the groomer to Rami Malek, Miles Teller, and all three Jonas brothers (Kevin, Joe, and Nick).

Ask Machado exactly how grooming for men differs from women and she'll say that, once upon a time, it was everything from the neck up (facial hair trimming, brow tweezing, skin maintenance, beard combing, hair shaving, etc.) Now, it's a head-to-toe job. "Say a client is shooting Men's Health tomorrow, and I know they're going to be shirtless. I'll go to their house the night before and spray tan them," Machado explains. "The one thing that used to make me a little bit crazy was people would say to me that grooming men means my job is so much easier, but that's not always the case."

We asked Machado to give us a closer look at what her job is actually like — and with all eyes on the youngest (and most recently engaged) Jonas brother, we talked a lot about Nick. Keep reading to find out the secret behind his trendy Met Gala haircut, the body foundation that makes his chest gleam, and the contouring trick she uses for his abs — yes, abs.

How Nick Jonas Created His Own Path to Success Outside the Jonas Brothers

by MIKE VULPO | Sun., Sep. 16, 2018 3:00 AM

In the book of Nick Jonas, the Jonas Brothers was always meant to be just a chapter.

When you think of the singer and actor, chances are his famous boy band group with brothers Joe Jonas and Kevin Jonas quickly comes to mind.

But long after "Burnin' Up" hit Radio Disney and Camp Rock premiered on Disney Channel, Nick and the guys have evolved in more ways than one. Kevin is a father and husband while Joe is the front man to DNCE.

As for Nick, the newly engaged Hollywood star continues to prove on his 26th birthday that he's the ultimate trailblazer of the popular trio.

It started at just seven years old when Nick secured a Broadway musical role in Les Misérables and Beauty and the Beast. Fast-forward to 11 when he wrote his first song that eventually turned into a record deal with Columbia Records at just 12 years old. And on September 5, 2005, Nicholas Jonas was released proving he was way ahead of the music game.

The front-page headlines, media scrutiny and fandom didn't really begin until the Jonas Brothers came into the picture. But in October 2013, the group announced an indefinite hiatus to pursue personal projects.

That's when Nick really stepped up to the Hollywood plate and proved he was going to be more than just another boy band member.

In addition to landing the lead role in the Broadway production of How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying, Nick knew he had to redefine himself.

"The challenge was, 'How do we educate people on who I am as a 21-year-old guy, as opposed to the 16-year-old kid they are familiar with?'" he recalled to American Way.

Steve Granitz/WireImage

As we learned from other stars, the transition from boy to man is a marathon and not a sprint. But over time, Nick began switching his sounds with his solo albums. He secured roles on the small screen that allowed to share a different side of himself. And yes, he took off his clothes for Flaunt magazine.

"There are songs on my record that I want people to have sex to, and songs people can listen to when they're pissed off. And I think that's the beautiful thing about music: that in those moments, you hear it and it elevates the scenario," he shared with the publication after posing in Calvin Klein boxer briefs.

While the photos may have grabbed the attention of some fans, it was his talents on and off stage that continued to keep fans intrigued.

2017 was filled with firsts for the A-list star who had his first role in a major blockbuster titled Jumanji. He also wrote his first song for a movie soundtrack. The track in question? Ferdinand's "Home" that ultimately became Golden Globe nominated.

"I'm really fortunate to not have to choose so far in my career. Besides designating a certain amount of time for each project, there hasn't come a situation where it was one or the other," Nick previously recalled to the Tribune News Service. "The music, I'm somewhat flexible because I create my own schedule there. And on the film side, I can work my music around film and television."

He added, "On a creative level, I think they really complement each other."

And before you put Nick into a certain box or expect him to follow a certain path, chances are he's going to surprise you in more ways than one.

When attending the 2018 Met Gala, Nick spent $2.75 to swipe his Metrocard and take the subway to the Metropolitan Museum of Art. And despite a Dolce & Gabbana suit and a glam team including Marissa Machado and Avo Yermagyan helping him out for fashion's biggest night, Nick is keen on doing life his way.

After all, not every artist can perform at EDC after attending the Billboard Music Awards one weekend and then head to the Stagecoach Music Festival to perform with close friend Shania Twain.

Through it all, Nick has managed to avoid dramatic headlines that plague child stars. He credits his "really close family" that includes a mom who "wouldn't let me fall off like that."

And it may not sound unique, but a strong work ethic goes a long way no matter what industry one finds themselves in.

"I always think I'm going to be fired the first day of a new job. Every time I start a new film or TV show or anything, my first reaction is, 'Ah, I'm going to get fired from this.' But it's part of the thing," he shared with the Tribune News Service. "It either destroys you or makes you great. You gotta lean toward letting it make you great, but not losing your mind in the process."

Spoken like a true trailblazer if we do say so ourselves!

How to Get Nick Jonas's Haircut from the Met Gala

BY ADAM HURLY
May 8, 2018

Frederic Harrison/Getty Images

Fashion and the Catholic Imagination, and I certainly didn't expect to see any Francis of Assisi-esque head donuts. I did expect Jared Leto to go full Gucei Jesus (which he did), but it was Nick Jonas who ascended to grooming heavens this year. He looked the most Roman of them all, and I am promptly taking this photo to the barbershop for an immediate copycatting.

It's just so clean and so perfectly blended, and the forehead fringe is so wonderfully askew. Jonas was cut by his longtime barber Ronnie McCoy III and groomed by the team at V76 for the event—specifically by Marissa Machado. Here's what Machado did to give him the best-groomed, and most on-theme look of the night (sorry, Leto).

What to tell the barber:

"To get the Nick Jonas haircut, tell your barber you want an extremely tight fade with hard edges," says Machado. "This look is supposed to feel edgy." (No pun intended alongside those hard edges weighted at the crown.) "He or she should go guard-free on the bottom, from the neckline up to where the line starts to fade. Then go into a 1-guard while blending into the fade. The top is a scissor cut to create texture."

What kind of hair does this look work for?

"This style works great on guys with thick, straight, or wavy hair. Nick has very thick hair that actually had to be cut into a bit for a choppy look." (Your barber may need to texturize your hair too, to help it lay flat.)

What if a guy has a receding hairline?

"He can ask his barber to leave the side edges a bit longer and style with a more forward look for a bit of added coverage," says Machado.

How to style the look:

"To style this look, spray a hair tonic in wet hair to nourish the hair and prepare it for styling," Machado says. (The tonic is like a conditioner that helps the hair absorb and magnify the effectiveness of the styler.)

"Next, blow dry hair to create some texture." Pat it into place as it dries, so it isn't too blown out.

"Finish with a clay pomade. Work the product deep into the root so it really takes hold to the hair, and then work into to desired shape."

How often do you need to cut it or touch it up?

"This style needs up keep," says Machado. The short faded sides need to stay short, and the top can't get too bulky. "Get ready to see your barber every 10-12 days," she warns. "However, it is easy to grow into a less severe fade if you aren't looking for the commitment."

We're calling it Hipster Roman Emperor.

Nick Jonas rode the subway to the Met Gala. Big deal. I ride the subway all the time.

Nick Jonas's haircut, on the other hand—which we're thinking about calling Hipster Roman Emperor—is pretty cool.

As a men's grooming writer, the Met Gala is typically less of an event for me than it is for our style writers, and much less so than any women's fashion journals out there.

But there are usually a couple guys whose grooming game is worth some press—and even then, it's rarely on theme. This year, that theme was "Heavenly Bodies:

Nick Jonas Talks His Grooming Routine and Fragrance Launch

It involves the sauna.

 Faith Cummings
AUG 9, 2018 1:58PM EDT

Though Nick Jonas is a newly-engaged man, his pending nuptials to Priyanka Chopra aren't the only things that are cause for celebration in his life right now. The multi-hyphenate creative is working on new music with Timbaland, has written his own play and screenplay, and he just released his first-ever fragrance with menswear style icon John Varvatos: part of the latest product in his collaboration with the globally-renowned brand.

Most celebrities create their own signature scent after reaching a certain level of stardom—think Ariana Grande, Justin Bieber, and countless others—so it's no surprise that Nick is finally cashing in on the world's desire to smell just like him. It's a natural progression given he's already made his mark in the entertainment and fashion industries, but the deal is a major one as his entire partnership with Varvatos marks the first time the legendary designer has ever put another name on his products besides his own.

Just in time for the fragrance's launch, we talked to Jonas about how his collaboration with the brand came to be, his brothers' thoughts on the scent, and his new music which we can expect later this month.

TV: When it comes to the red carpet, you work with an amazing stylist Avo Yermagyan and your groomer Marissa Machado and you knock it out of the park for every event. Do you have any kind of rituals you do in getting ready for the red carpet? I know it can be super fun to go to these different events, but you're probably also still in work mode a bit.

NJ: Red carpet events can be pretty high pressure and that's particularly the case during awards season. This was the first time when I was in the mix because I wrote a song that was part of an animated movie that was nominated for a Golden Globe. I was incredibly nervous, so the day of, I had to have a full routine to calm my nerves and so I could enjoy the process. That usually means getting up early and getting a good workout in and then getting in the sauna to get a nice sweat going. And then my grooming routine includes a great moisturizer that feels good and everything from there that makes it look like I got a little bit more sleep than I did.

As far as my team goes, they're incredible and they have a really good sense of my taste. And more importantly, I know that feeling comfortable and confident is the key to being my best.

Jon Hamm's Hair Isn't Full of Secrets—It's Dry Shampoo

A look inside celebrity groomer Kim Verbeck's beauty kit. Her job is to make Hollywood's leading guys (like Jon Hamm and Milo Ventimiglia) look like babes on the red carpet.

Traditionally when we talk about celebrities getting "red-carpet ready," the conversation is about women. The topic is so ubiquitous there's even been a movement to direct reporters' questions for actresses away from it. You know, that little thing called "Ask Her More?"

But what's rarely discussed is the entire army of groomers behind Hollywood's leading men—a wildly talented crew, many of whom are women, that's tasked with making sure their clients aren't the butt of a self-tanner meme. Because, yes, lots of spray tans are involved. Concealer and dry shampoo, too!

But what's rarely discussed is the entire army of groomers behind Hollywood's leading men—a wildly talented crew, many of whom are women, that's tasked with making sure their clients aren't the butt of a self-tanner meme. Because, yes, lots of spray tans are involved. Concealer and dry shampoo, too!

Here, we caught up with four stylists—plus, the men they make glow—to hear more about what goes on behind the scenes when guys get ready for the cameras. From the TMI (nose hair trimming) to stuff that'll truly make you jealous (La Mer regimens), these routines might not be fraction of what most of us go through on a given day, but they sure are fascinating.

Groomer Kim Verbeck, 46, and actor Jon Hamm, 45, started working together long before Don Draper was even a thing. "It was 2006, on an Interview magazine shoot, and Mad Men hadn't yet debuted," says Hamm. "Kimmy has been 'my people' ever since."

"I remember the third time we worked together," says groomer Marissa Machado, 33, of Bleed for This actor Miles Teller, 29. "It was for 21 & Over, and I came in the room and said, 'Nice to see you,' and he goes, 'So, are you, like, my girl now?'" That was four years ago, and she's still by his side, cutting hair, blotting shine....

GLAMOUR: Do you two ever peruse Getty Images and think, Nailed it!

Miles Teller: The Oscars [in 2015, for Whiplash]. Dug it.

Marissa Machado: Oh my God, yes! But that was a stressful situation. It was Miles' first time attending, so he had a few nerves, as did I! We had a few disagreements, a slight panic, but in the end we worked it out: structured hair—a big movie star moment.

GLAMOUR: Any red-carpet hacks? Self-tanner a yes or no?

MT: I'd say yes. Because you can feel like shit, and everyone is like, "Oh my God, you look amazing!"

The Trick to Kit Harington's Perfectly Groomed Hair

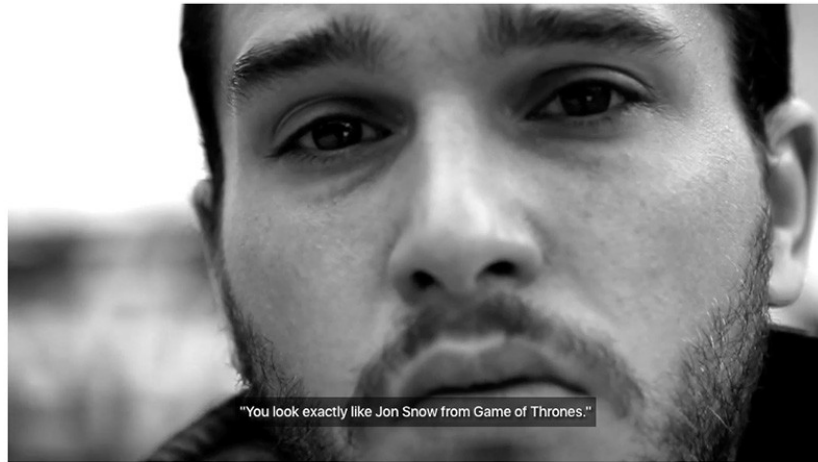

BY JOHN JANNUZZI
June 15, 2015

There are no Game of Thrones spoilers ahead because this is about hair. In all of Westeros, nobody has a better mane than Jon Snow, not even the Lannisters, who fancy themselves lions. In the actual real world, the same is true of Kit Harington, who plays Jon Snow. It's a tough 'do to emulate unless you're genetically blessed with long flowing curly locks. Even so, we rang up celebrity hairstylist Marissa Machado to see what the deal is.

WATCH

Gamer of the Year: Kit Harington

She first confirmed for us that Kit probably doesn't do too much to get his easy flowing locks, "Kit's hair is really naturally curly. It dries like that." Bummer for us dudes with wavy and/or straight hair, but there is hope! "When the hair is wet, you'll wanna go through it with a product like Kevin Murphy's Motion Lotion. It enhances curls. Get it through from root to end." Marissa then told us the best course of action would be to blow dry it on low with a "hot sock," which she describes this as a sort of sock-like fabric that goes over the end of your blow dryer to control air and temperature. While blowdrying, use your fingers to twirl strands and get that curling action going. Once you're dry, work some styling paste (she suggests Kevin Murphy's Undressed) into your hands and start shaping the hair around your face. Marissa tells us that it's all about time and effort here and that this isn't something you can just do casually on your way out.

If you're a guy with curly Jon Snow-like hair, but are looking for the right cut, Marissa cautions against going to a regular barber. "With curly hair, you really want to stick with somebody who cuts in a salon, somebody that knows how to cut curls specifically." Sometimes you've gotta go to great lengths for great locks.

Nick Jonas shares his grooming secrets and we're sure that these must have swept Priyanka Chopra off her feet

Nik Jonas talks about his grooming routine and fragrance launch

Written By Avanika Gupta | Mumbai | Updated: August 15, 2018 09:04 pm | 250142 reads | 2 comments f t

Nick Jonas has become quite the man of the hour, courtesy our very own desi girl, Priyanka Chopra. However, seems like his life is swinging in the upwards direction and his engagement is not the only thing that calls for celebrations. The multi-talented individual has just released his first-ever fragrance with menswear style icon John Varvatos. Jonas has already made a mark for himself in the entertainment and fashion industry and this fragrance launch will indeed send his fans into a major frenzy.

Teen Vogue recently got into a conversation with Nick and spoke at length about his latest collaboration with the brand, his sibling's reaction to the scent and about his new music. When about his collaboration with Varvatos, the young singer said, "

It is so exciting. The beauty of this collaboration and partnership with John across the board was really an organic thing." He further narrated the story of how they were seated next to each other at a party approximately a year ago. He further elaborated saying that they clicked immediately and spoke about everything from fashion to music to life. Nick revealed how he was always fascinated with fragrance and wanted to learn about the whole process of it. He also revealed that for the creation of the scent, he let John take the lead to a certain extent, but it was a collaborative process.

When the 'Find You' singer was asked if he has given the perfume to his brothers to test, he says, he cheekily replied, "No, I always try to be selfish for as long as possible. I'm still trying to be the best smelling man in the room. I'll give them a bottle eventually though."

Nick works with the most talented team including stylist Avo Yermagyan and groomer Marissa Machado who help him get that perfect red carpet look. He gave out details of the rituals he follows when he steps out for a public appearance. The youngest Jonas brother accepted that red carpet appearances can be quite pressurizing especially during awards season. His rituals usually include waking up early in the morning, going in for a perfect workout and then getting in the sauna to get a nice sweat going and then finally a really good moisturiser.

Nick Jonas Rides the Subway to the 2018 Met Gala

by ZACH JOHNSON | Tue., May. 8, 2018 6:25 AM

Instagram

Some celebrities, like Katy Perry, required special modes of transportation to get to the 2018 Met Gala in New York City Monday. Other people, like Nick Jonas, were less high-maintenance. (We're not throwing shade at Perry; how else was she going to bring wings that span six feet?!)

For a mere $2.75, Jonas swiped his MetroCard and took the subway to 77th St. and Lexington Ave., just blocks away from the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Jonas wore Dolce & Gabbana, as did Emilia Clarke, Andy Cohen, Christian Combs, Darren Criss, Marjorie Harvey, Sarah Jessica Parker and Tabitha Simmons. Jonas' stylist, Avo Yermagyan, dressed him in a single-breasted shawl lapel tuxedo, made in black silk brocade with 24K gold thread hand-top-stitching. Jonas completed his look with a white poplin shirt with gold and onyx buttons, black velvet slippers and a black velvet belt, and the singer added some swag with a diamond, gold and onyx jewels.

He shared photos and videos from his impromptu subway shoot on Instagram and Instagram Stories. Marissa Machado used V76 by Vaughn products to groom Jonas for Fashion's Biggest Night, and barber Ronnie McCoy III gave him a fresh buzz, making not a hair was out of place.

The "Home" singer kicked back at The Mark Hotel—the same spot where Bradley Cooper, Kim Kardashian, Issa Rae, Irina Shayk and more stars were spotted getting dressed up for the gala.

Watch Nick Jonas Get Met Gala-Ready: Push-Ups, Pizza, and Dreams of Rihanna

MAY 8, 2018 4:50 PM
by MACKENZIE WAGONER

Yesterday, just hours before entering the Costume Institute's new exhibition, "Heavenly Bodies: Fashion and the Catholic Imagination," Nick Jonas is the picture of ease at The Mark Hotel. "Gorgeous day," he remarks over coffee. "Prepare to be amazed." The Texas-born singer, clad in a white bathrobe, is carrying the calm that comes with his third consecutive Met Gala. "As a man, there's not a whole lot you have to do to prepare for these things," he says, pointing out that a "lived-in manicure" received days before was nearly half the battle. The rest of the night's success, he has learned, lives in a "state of mind, and a really good haircut."

Yesterday, just hours before entering the Costume Institute's new exhibition, "Heavenly Bodies: Fashion and the Catholic Imagination," Nick Jonas is the picture of ease at The Mark Hotel. "Gorgeous day," he remarks over coffee. "Prepare to be amazed." The Texas-born singer, clad in a white bathrobe, is carrying the calm that comes with his third consecutive Met Gala. "As a man, there's not a whole lot you have to do to prepare for these things," he says, pointing out that a "lived-in manicure" received days before was nearly half the battle. The rest of the night's success, he has learned, lives in a "state of mind, and a really good haircut."

Celebrity groomer Marissa Machado keeps Jonas's closely cropped fade in place with a spritz of V76 Hair and Scalp Tonic and a pinch of Moroccanoil Texture Clay, as well as a dab of cream around his eyes to ensure he won't look "too tired." To get that virile "slight pump going on" beneath his Dolce & Gabbana tuxedo—his favorite Met Gala suit to date—an in-room mini workout of push-ups is in order. "Hello, Rihanna," he says as he steadily pushes his toned arms up and down. While it may be more of a mental exercise than anything else, the added strength certainly doesn't hurt, especially when tasked with pulling off a 24-karat gold-embroidered jacket late into the night.

After a misting of CoStume National's Scent Intense, the singer arrives at his biggest decision of the night: bow tie with his gold crucifix necklace, or no bow tie? "Together, it's Godfather III," warns Jonas's stylist, Avo Yermagyan. "Without, it's Godfather I." And with that, he slips off the accessory and out of the hotel for some pre-party sustenance: two slices of pepperoni pizza. The "epic" journey to the gala is only a few subway stops and fan selfies away. What could be breezier than skipping Fifth Avenue rush hour traffic? After all, he says, "Tonight is all about elegance."
