BEAUTY

WINGED LINER

The benefit: Lifted eyes
Been told you "look tired" one too many times lately? But don't fret—the corners of your eyes tend to be a little more droopy, says Duffell. "A wing at the outer corner gives eyes a more lift."

Apply with purpose: Use an ultra-fine-tipped liner for a quick stroke. Try CoverGirl's Liquid Liner in Black ($7.99, covergirl.com) or CoverGirl Bombshell Intensity Liner by LashArtist in Chocolate Kiss ($7.99, drugstores). Fine-lined liners don't provide enough definition, while brights can be distracting.

Start with the wing—Duffell trusts the length to "lead your way back and make the line thinner as you move inward."

PASTEL EYE SHADOW

The benefit: Larger, brighter eyes
Brown shadow might be a good everyday bet, but it's also pretty plain. "With light colors, it's like shining a flashlight on your gems, making them appear bigger and brighter," says makeup artist A.J. Cronin.

Apply with purpose: Almost any color (blue, green, peach) can make eyes look tired. But if you want to be strategic, Cronin's egg blue and fuchsia make eyes appear bigger, whether they're almond-shaped or not. Try Always Shadow Softies in Like ($5, drugstores), patte d'oeil (a sparkle in blue eyes), CoverGirl's Enhanced Eye Shadow in Ink ($10, drugstores), and ColorBlast Eye Shadow in Emerald Dream ($5, drugstores). Brown a healthy effect by choosing a shade with a hint of shimmer.

To further outshrine, first apply a fresh-colored shadow, says Duffell. Then layer the pastel from lash line to just above the crease. The finishing touch: heaps of false lashes.

cheek performance

A cape for choosing peach blush instead of pink

- > It's universally flattering. The golden undertones in peach add warmth to many skin tones, says Cronin.
- > It doubles as bronzer. Instead of applying to the apples, drag it just underneath your cheekbones "to where they meet your jawline," says Cronin. "By cupping the face with warm color, you get a slimming effect."
- > It contrasts from dark circles. Orange is opposite blue on the color wheel, so according to basic color theory, peach works high on the cheekbones, cuts out excess blue tones under your eyes.

1/ SHOW-OFF SPOT: Upper Chest
There's a lot women want to get off their chests—most notably, as spots and those dang diagonal lines that pop up in your thirties. A retinol cream, like Strivectin-AL Advanced Retinol Night Treatment ($300, strivectin.com), builds up collagen over time to tackle both problems. Start with a pea-size dab two nights a week, work up to every night. For a faster fix, blur "peppering" lines by dusting a gold-toned shimmer powder over your cuticle. Try Victoria's Secret Smooth Skin Shimmer Shimmer Powder ($20, victoriassecret.com).
