TIME-SAVING TAN

There goes the sun! Snag a summery glow with these foolproof tips that deliver pro results in a jiffy.

Reach for a mousse. The light texture is easier to blend, and it absorbs in about one minute (versus five or more for creams or gels).
—Anna Stanklewicz, celebrity spray tanner and creator of Suvara World

Exfoliate skin pre-tan. Removing dead surface cells prevents blotches, since product buildup often stems from dry patches, saving you time in the long run.
—Stanklewicz

Use a tanning mitt to quickly cover larger areas. You'll avoid the need to scrub stains off your hands and help ensure a streak-free finish.
—Karen Brown, celebrity spray tanner and cofounder of Karora Cosmetics

Post-application, use a large powder brush to dust on talc-free baby powder. In addition to absorbing excess oil, this nondrying trick helps set the formula, which counteracts any tacky after-feel and pesky stains on clothes or sheets.

Speedy services

Don't want to DIY? Visit the pros for one of these cosmetic quickies, available nationwide.

Blow-out: Book an appointment at Drybar and in 45 minutes (that's up to half an hour faster than a standard salon blow-out), you'll emerge with a smooth, swoon-worthy style that lasts for days...so you won't have to spend time shampooing, drying, and styling it yourself. ($40; thedrybar.com for locations)

Facial: The Microderm-abrasion Mini Facial at Elizabeth Arden Red Door Spas gives skin some serious buff love in 25 minutes flat, including light exfoliation via a diamond-tip wand. Since microdermabrasions take less time to do than a peel (while delivering a deeper level of exfoliation), this zippy treatment is the perfect way to get glowing. The trick to keeping it short and sweet: no extractions, steam, or massage. ($125; reddoorspa.com for locations)

Makeup: Can't seem to master a smoky eye or faux-lash application? Sephora offers 15-minute makeovers, which include a single-feature mini makeup look to get you glam in a hurry. Even better, it's free! (sephora.com for locations)
