

Art Department

Personal STYLE MILKA PRICA

This expat stylist has outgrown L.A.'s vibe, down to the Jack-Johnson-swap leopard print. BY GREGG KLEIN

Having previously scouted for Harper's BAZAAR Australia, among other places, it's no surprise that while she might live in the laidback California city, Prica has already adopted the west A's laid-back style. The 30-year-old stylist, who works for a fashion brand, says, "I've worn the same jacket every day since I moved here. It's not like I have a closet full of clothes. I just have a few things that I love." Prica is a fan of the "California girl" aesthetic, which she describes as "casual, comfortable, and always with a touch of vintage."

Milka Prica says she loves the laid-back California style, but she's also a fan of the "California girl" aesthetic, which she describes as "casual, comfortable, and always with a touch of vintage."

she says, citing the vibrant American style during the 1960s and 1970s. Lately, Prica has been looking for vintage pieces that she can wear to work. She says, "I love the idea of wearing something that has a story behind it. I've found some really cool pieces that I can wear to work. I've also found some really cool pieces that I can wear to work."

she says, citing the vibrant American style during the 1960s and 1970s. Lately, Prica has been looking for vintage pieces that she can wear to work. She says, "I love the idea of wearing something that has a story behind it. I've found some really cool pieces that I can wear to work. I've also found some really cool pieces that I can wear to work."

I Brand and Bunkle on with the same style as great. Prica says, "I love the idea of wearing something that has a story behind it. I've found some really cool pieces that I can wear to work. I've also found some really cool pieces that I can wear to work."

I Brand and Bunkle on with the same style as great. Prica says, "I love the idea of wearing something that has a story behind it. I've found some really cool pieces that I can wear to work. I've also found some really cool pieces that I can wear to work."

Milka Prica

www.art-dept.com