TO DIE FOR
WHAT YOU CAN'T LIVE WITHOUT

Somewhere between a sleek, latex-embossed vision of the future and a smoke-fogged '50s drawing room emerged Nicolas Ghesquière's fall collection for Balenciaga. The show kicked off with a set of three black dresses that channeled both Cristobal Balenciaga's Basque heritage and Henri-Georges Clouzot's 1955 film Les Diaboliques, and ended with dresses painted with Chinese landscapes. But the real show-stoppers in Ghesquière's femme fatale lineup was the crystal jewelry, part of Balenciaga.Edition, a line that reimagines Cristobal's original clothing and jewelry. The "Diane" necklace (left) references a 1960s collaboration between the brand and the famous French costume designer Roger Jean-Pierre, an ode to the Roman goddess Diana, the huntress. Finally, some history worth repeating. —Alexa Brazilian
