◆ DANIEL RILEY ◆ BEN WATTS

The world's greatest soccer player is also the biggest, buffest athlete on the planet—and therefore the perfect man to kick off GQ's 44-page celebration of all things corporeal. (His co-host, the spectacular ALESSANDRA AMBROSIO, also appears to exercise.) Are you ready? Because this issue is about to get swole

ALESSANDRA AMBROSIO. Brazilian Victoria's-Secret-model-slash-fashion-line-namesake, had never met Cristiano Ronaldo, Portuguese soccer-god-slash-underwear-line-namesake, until GQ's photo shoot. And yet Alessandra—man, even her name is sexy, all purred consonants—quickly found common ground with him. They both speak Portuguese. They both have young kids. They both make everyone else look ugly. But only one of them has been modeling for almost two decades, so Alessandra worked to make Cristiano feel at ease. “In front of the camera, I’m super-comfortable,” she says. “It’s just, act normal.” And so here you have it: normal Alessandra, being normal with some normal guy.
