GearLab | TITANIUM WATCHES

1 A-21 Vintage
ROLEX $17,900
 With an antique-style dial, this movement (28,800 vph) may be worn under a full-size Oyster Perpetual. But for other things, the white dial, including the date window, is a perfect match for the pin-stem.

2 Palageo
OMEGA $1,900
 The Palageo is loaded with cool elements: "spherical" hands. First used in 1985, luminous markers to read the white watch in the dark, and even a helium escape valve so the crystal won't blow out if you take its 500-meter depth rating.

3 Titanium Auto
HAMILTON $1,900
 Hamilton's Khaki Field collection has a cult following. Distressed watch collector John Mayer calls it one of his favorites. With a blacked-out PVD coating, this is the swatchiest, if not smallest, of our top titanium watches.

4 Seamaster 300 Master Co-Axial
OMEGA $9,900
 Introduced in steel 60 years ago, the Seamaster gets modern materials. Its bezel is polished ceramic, and its case and bracelet are made of a commercial-level alloy of titanium, aluminum, zirconium, and vanadium.

5 Model 247 TI-GMT
BALENCIAGA $6,900
 Inspired by a twin-engineer flying outfit from the '30s, the 247 uses aviation-grade titanium alloy in its case, crown, and chronograph pushers—which are spiral-engraved, reminiscent of an airplane's nose cone.

Not-So-Heavy Metal
 Half the weight of steel, titanium resists corrosion, is hypoallergenic, and is perfect for today's sporty watches. by CHRIS WRIGHT
