The bracelets are arranged in a row, showing different textures and designs. Some have dragon heads, some have Naga motifs, and some have intricate patterns. The background is black, and the bracelets are reflected on a dark surface below them.

Classic Chain bracelets offer an array of timeless looks and styles, from sophisticated to dramatic. In some, clasps are adorned with the elegant glimmer of diamond pavé, while others come to life with accents inspired by the iconic Naga.

1 A-21 Vintage
ROLEX $17,900
 With an all-steel design, Rolex introduced the A-21. First thing to be aware of is that it has a flat sapphire crystal. But for other things, the case is a classic Oyster Perpetual. The 23,000-volt automatic rotor is a 24-hour power reserve. The sapphire crystal is the pin down. Rolex.com

2 Palagos
OMEGA $1,900
 The Palagos is loaded with cool elements: "spherical" hands. First used in 1985, luminous markers to read the whole watch in the dark, and even a helium escape valve so the crystal won't blow out if you take its 500-meter depth rating. Omega.ch

3 Titanium Auto
HAMILTON $1,100
 Hamilton's Khaki Field collection has a cult following. Discovered watch collector John Mayer calls it one of his favorites. With a blacked-out PVD coating, this is the swatchiest, if not smallest, of our top titanium watches. Hamiltonwatch.com

4 Seamaster 300 Master Co-Axial
OMEGA $9,900
 Introduced in steel 65 years ago, the Seamaster gets modern materials. Its bezel is polished ceramic, and its case and bracelet are made of a commercial-level alloy of titanium, aluminum, zirconium, and vanadium. Omega.com

5 Model 247 TI-GMT
BALENCIAGA $6,900
 Inspired by a twin-engineer Boeing airliner from the '30s, the 247 uses aviation-grade titanium alloy in its case, crown, and chronograph pushers—which are spiral-engraved, reminiscent of an airplane's nose cone. Balenciaga.com

Not-So-Heavy Metal
 Half the weight of steel, titanium resists corrosion, is hypoallergenic, and is perfect for today's sporty watches. by CHRIS WRIGHT
