A collection of various gold and silver bracelets, including a dragon head bracelet and a Naga bracelet, displayed against a black background. The bracelets are arranged in a row, showing different designs and materials. The dragon head bracelet is particularly prominent, featuring a detailed dragon head design. The Naga bracelet has a snake-like head design. Other bracelets include simple gold and silver links and a braided chain.

Classic Chain bracelets offer an array of timeless looks and styles, from sophisticated to dramatic. In some, clasps are adorned with the elegant glimmer of diamond pavé, while others come to life with accents inspired by the iconic Naga.

GearLab | TITANIUM WATCHES

1 A-21 Vintage
ROLEX $17,900
 With an unpolished case, the A-21 is meant to be worn under a watch chain through. But for other things, the white dial, black leather strap, and 20,000-foot water resistance make it a great choice for the gym.

2 Palago
OROLOGIO $1,200
 The Palago is made with a cool, aluminum "titanium" finish. First used in 1985, luminous markers to read the white watch in the dark, and even a helium escape valve so the crystal won't blow out if you take it 500-meter depth diving.

3 Titanium Auto
HAMILTON $200
 Hamilton's Khaki Field collection has a cult following. Discovered watch collector John Mayer calls it one of his favorites. With a blacked-out PVD coating, this is the swatchiest, if not smallest, of our top titanium watches.

4 Seamaster 300 Master Co-Alial
OMEGA $9,900
 Introduced in steel 60 years ago, the Seamaster gets modern materials. Its bezel is polished chrome, and its case and bracelet are made of a commercial-level alloy of titanium, aluminum, zirconium, and vanadium.

5 Model 247 TI-GMT
BALENCIAGA $6,900
 Inspired by a twin-engineer during service from the '30s, the 247 uses aviation-grade titanium alloy in its case, crown, and chronograph pushers—which are spiral-engraved, reminiscent of an airplane's screw prop.

Not-So-Heavy Metal
 Half the weight of steel, titanium resists corrosion, is hypoallergenic, and is perfect for today's sporty watches. by CHRIS WRIGHT
