“There are 360 degrees, so why stick to one?”—wise words from the late design dynamo Zaha Hadid. We agree, especially when it comes to creating contemporary jewelry. Diamonds in particular shine all the brighter when set in imaginative designs that curve, feather, and spiral into graphic shapes, catching light and complementing the human form in inventive ways. The architectural pieces on these pages show diamonds in a daring light.

GearLab TITANIUM WATCHES

1 A-2T Vintage
BERTUCCI $120
With an affordable quartz movement, the A2-T isn't likely to be worn under a tux like Bond's Omega. But for checking the time while chopping some wood, the 1.9-ounce watch with nylon Zulu strap gets the job done. bertucciwatches.com

2 Pelagos
TUDOR $4,400
The Pelagos is loaded with cool elements: "snowflake" hands, first used in 1969; luminous markers to read the whole watch in the dark; and even a helium escape valve so the crystal won't blow out if you test its 500-meter depth rating. tudorwatch.com

3 Titanium Auto
HAMILTON $995
Hamilton's Khaki Field collection has a cult following: Obsessive watch collector John Mayer cites it as one of his favorites. With a blacked-out PVD coating, this is the stealthiest, if not smallest, of our top titanium watches. hamiltonwatch.com

4 Seamaster 300 Master Co-Axial
OMEGA $9,000
Introduced in steel 60 years ago, the classic gets modern materials: Its bezel is polished ceramic, and its case and bracelet are made of a commercial-level alloy of titanium, aluminum, vanadium, and iron. omegawatches.com

5 Model 247 Ti-GMT
BREMONT $6,895
Inspired by a twin-engined Boeing airliner from the '30s, the 247 uses aviation-grade titanium alloy in its case, crown, and chronograph-pushers—which are spiral-engraved, reminiscent of an airplane's screw props. bremont.com

Not-So-Heavy Metal
Half the weight of steel, titanium resists corrosion, is hypoallergenic, and is perfect for today's sporty watches. by CHRIS WRIGHT
