THE WATCHMAN

When award-winning menswear designer Robert Geller started talking to watchmaker G-Shock about a possible collaboration involving its Metal Twisted G-Shock (MT-G), he immediately saw an alignment between their two brands. "G-Shock is based on its quality, its toughness. It's something that will last forever, and that's what I want to do with my clothing, as well," says Geller, who produces nearly 100 percent of his collection in Japan.

At the most recent New York Fashion Week, that collaboration came to fruition, as the designer incorporated the bold-faced timepiece into a dozen of his runway looks. "My collection is sort of worn," explains Geller, who will soon be introducing his brand to the European market, while also launching a denim line. "And the MT-G is very pristine, perfectly finished. It just worked really well, in a contrasty way."

Dualities are important to Geller. "I like that complexity in men," he says. "The idea of having a combination of masculinity and sensitivity, strength and romance—that to me is very modern. Sometimes I describe it as a guy who loves to go to a football match but still loves his mom." So is Geller a tough guy, we wonder? The designer smirks, admiring the MT-G on his wrist. "I'm tough enough."

MT-G

THE METAL TWISTED G-SHOCK combines tough shock resistance with an unexpected elegance. The stainless steel, resin, and Alpha Gel® structure ensures mechanical integrity, while updates from global transmitting stations guarantee accuracy, along with Triple G Resist for shock, vibration, and centrifugal force resistance. The MT-G is the epitome of modern timekeeping. Available in black & black/rose gold ($1,000) and silver ($900). Find out more at gshock.com/mtg.
